Paper No. 201217

Comment 1
I understand that the paper is written with a Sri Lankan perspective and can be a very good narration of issues relating to e-governance in the country. The presenter has made a very good presentation and has tried to cover many important areas related to ICT and the ensuing e-governance in Sri Lanka. I would like to see how the authors have collected real data and used to identify the cause and effect relationship between ICT and public service in the country. Many congratulations to the authors for the present paper anyway.

Presenter seems to have some inside knowledge of the Sri Lanka governance system. She has mentioned many facts in here presentation that will usually not be available to an outsider of the system. In that sense, it is a great paper, and I enjoyed a deeper explanation of how the governance system in Sri Lanka is structured and works.

Madam. Mudalige! Many thanks for your very pleasant presentation. I have to Sri Lanka myself and have seen how a beautiful country was locked in a very disturbing war. I am sure your country will have a lot to catch now as the war has finished for some years. I would appreciate it if you could also explain your country's governance structure's pre-war and post-war scenario.

Question No. 1
What were the economic costs of the civil war in Sri Lanka?

Question No. 2
How big and important is the role of ICTA in your country?

Question No. 3
How has the country’s more recent political instability affected the country’s efforts towards implementing a comprehensive concept of e-governance?
